PENDING FEDERAL BILLS TO SWELL CALIF. REVENUES

One Measure Permits Sale Tax on State Imports, The Other Would Tax Banks

Sacramento, May 31—California will receive approximately $9,000,000 a year in additional revenue if two proposed Federal laws now before Congress are passed.

Fred E. Stewart has been at the National Capitol for several weeks working for the passage of the bills and expressed optimism as to the measure becoming law.

"One of these bills will permit States having sales taxes to place a tax on intersate shipments," Stewart said. "Considerable opposition has been raised against this bill in Congress from firms which ship most of their goods from the state in which their factory.... is located to other states. At present such shipments escape state taxes because of their interstate character and thus local merchants are subjected to unfair competition.

"The bill has a fair chance for passage at this session, but if not enacted into law now, will surely be passed at the next session of Congress. It is essential that the Federal Government permit such interstate shipments to be taxed for the protection of merchants in states like California, where the sales tax is in effect, who are forced to meet competition of goods upon which no sales tax is levied. Passage of this bill would mean that California would receive approximately $3,000,000 a year more from taxes levied against interstate shipments received in California.

The other bill for which Stewart represented this state in Washington was one which liberalizes the right of states to tax National banks. California, prior to 1929, had been taxing banks and corporations by a method which was declared by tax experts to be probably invalid as conflicting with the Federal Law, which the bill now before Congress would change.

The Legislature in that year in conformity with the tax experts' suggestions enacted a new state law and taxes from banks promptly fell off from approximately $5,000,000 annually to less than $700,000 a year.

"Should Congress enact this law liberalizing the states' rights in regard to taxing banks," said Stewart, "it would mean our legislature could authorize taxation of banks on a basis which would return between five and six million dollars a year. This can in no sense be called a new tax, but simply an equalization of the tax burden insofar as the banks are concerned."

The bank bill has an excellent chance of becoming law, according to Stewart. He said Congress apparently recognizes the injustice which has been done the states through stringent Federal restrictions on states' methods of taxing banks.

DEWITT CLINTON BEIGHTOL, DEAD

DeWitt Clinton Beightol, who passed away Wednesday at his home on Grove street, leaves many friends in this city to mourn. He had lived in this city for more than 50 years, excepting occasional absences when his trade as a mill man called him to mines along the Mother Lode.

In a last letter to friends he asked that he be buried from the Funeral Home of W. R. Jefford & Son in this city, formerly the Congregational church which Mr. Beightol attended when a youth. He also asked Mrs. Katherine Celio to sing an anthem at the services.

Mr. Beightol was born in Ohio 75 years ago, coming to California, a young boy with his parents. He was educated in the Nevada City schools. He had many friends in this city, made during his long life here, and retained because of the sterling quality of his character.

Funeral arrangements will be announced by W. R. Jefford & Son as soon as instructions are received from relatives in Ohio.

STEALS DRUM OF GAS, BUT BORROWS TIN CAN

Will Davis, of Willow Valley, a few days since came up from down below with his family and brought with him a drum of gasoline. Leaving the drum at his garage, with little time to spare, he went to attend a funeral. When he returned the drum was gone. Inquiry of the neighbors, regarding possible thieves who might have visited his place during his short absence, turned up only one clue. A truck driver had stopped at one of the neighbors and borrowed a tin can. The driver said he had bought a drum of gasoline but that he had no way of filling his tank except with a can, and had forgotten to get him one.

"What kind of a man is this," queries Davis, "who steals a drum of gasoline but honestly borrows a tin can?"

CAMPFIRE GIRLS SEEK QUARTERS IN SCOUT LODGE

At a Boy Scout meeting Monday evening, Scout Executive Harris Ricksecker, of Auburn, and Judge Raglan Tuttle, reported they have drawn tentative plans for the log lodge for the scouts for the P. G. & E., lot in Nevada City.

Mrs. Edwin Berger, who represented the Parent Teacher Association, was present to ask about using the lodge. She wanted to know if a room could be added so that the newly organized Camp Fire Girl group could use it. It was referred to the building committee for a report to be made at the next meeting.

Ricksecker reported on work at Camp Pahatsi. He stated the camp had a capacity of 70 boys a week.

Albert Pratti, junior assistant scout master, made a report on the camporee held in Auburn recently. He took one Patrol down and they received an A rating for camp moral, cooking, patrol organization, etc. Out of 24 Patrols, 12 received A ratings. These 12 are eligible to go to Stockton this fall to the big Camporal.

There was a splendid attendance of members and officials. Dr. C. W. Chapman presided in place of Horace Curnow, who was away on business.

In regard to the forming of a new troop, a motion was passed that the chairman be authorized to conclude sponsorship and authorization of the second troop of Boy Scouts.

EXCAVATION FOR POOL COMPLETED

The excavation for the municipal swimming pool has been completed and within a short time the work of cementing the walls and bottom of the pool will begin. The conduits for emptying the pool are in place and the intake will soon be finished.

Due to the fact that it is hoped to have the pool ready for the dedication on the morning of the Fourth of July, work from now on will be expedited, it was learned, in every possible way.

Last Wednesday morning a large truck and trailer brought several tons of steel for reinforcement, outlet pipe and a concrete mixer to the pool site. Several local men were called to work early Thursday morning.

INSURANCE MONEY TO BE USED FOR REBUILDING

Sheriff George Carter has been made trustee of $1200, the sum received on the insurance policy paid when the Ski club house burned. He was notified of his trusteeship in a letter from Mrs. Louise Simkins, who holds a mortgage on the Ski club grounds, in which she stated that she desired the money to be expended for rebuilding the club house. The Ski club members are now waiting for a report of its building committee on the cost of the plan which has been submitted.

New Mining Era For California Dawning, Says Errol MacBoyle

BY ERROL MACBOYLE
(From Western Mining News)

Gold mining in California stands on the threshold of an era of prosperity that can rival the pioneer days so far as production is concerned, providing business men and politicians do not make the same mistake regarding the industry that came so close to killing all mining enterprise in the State some years ago. Intelligent State and Federal legislation, with the cooperation of agricultural and industrial interests, applied to mining will result in the employment of thousands of additional men in the mines of California and the production of many more millions of dollars, both of which will go a long way toward restoring normalcy and herald a new and greater prosperity.

General world conditions are now strongly in favor of a substantial mining advance. The rise in the price of gold to $35 an ounce, an increase of $14.33 per ounce over the former "standard" price, has made it possible to operate hundreds of mines that were forced to close down because of their inability to produce an ounce of gold at a cost of less than $20.67, which was the former world's price fixed by international agreement. This difference between the old and present price, now makes possible a profit on millions of tons of ore that would not pay for extractin and treatment under former conditions.

INCREASE IN OUTPUT EXPECTED

With reasonable assurance to the mining operators and investors that the errors of previous years will not be repeated, these low-grade deposits will undoubtedly be opened up and their wealth made available for the needs of commerce and currency. As a consequence, we may anticipate a steady rise inthe annual gold output of California to the figure of the '60s, when $30,000,000 to $40,000,000 in gold bullion was annually contributed to the prosperity of this State and to the wealth and security of our Nation.

The welfare of the entire world and civilization as we now conceive it, rests upon an adequate gold supply. Recognized for generations as the sinews of war, gold is equally the basis and brawn of peace. It is the gold miner who produces the foundation for sound currency and puts tangible value behind the money with which salaries are paid and necessities are bought, with which buildings and businesses are built and new ventures financed, and that underlies international trade and credit and the enormous sums demanded to balance the budgets of the nations. In view of this fact, now at least generally recognized, it is not very likely that there will be a recurrence of the old antagonism to gold mining by banking, agricultural and business interests that was one of primary reasons for California's gold yield crashing down from the high point of $81,294,700 in 1852, to—$8,526,703 in 1929. It was antagonismto mining that brough about the passage of the Anti-Debris Law when there are still some $600,000,000 of gold left lying in the placer deposits of this State.

THINGS THAT WRECK MINING

Mining history is replete with incidents of adverse legislation that attacked the industry. The burden of increased costs, heavy taxation, and burdensome compensation insurance rates very nearly had the effect of putting the gold miner out of business. And it is significant to note that these hardships were not imposed when the old-timers were taking the surface gold that was easy to get, but were levied upon the modern operator, who must seek hidden deposits and undertake very extensive and costly task of wresting the precious meal from low-grade and often deep-seated deposits.

These are some of the factors that made it virtually impossible to obtain capital for gold mining endeavor in California and the other states of the Union. Meanwhile, American investors, eager to participate in the rich rewards that this industry offers, were driven to invest in mining companies operating in Canada, for there the industry was receiving endorsement from their banks, their farmers and their business houses, as well as from the Government itself, which, with its legislators, were leading the progressive movement that had for its objective the development of the gold resources of Canada. How successful this policy of public and governmenttal cooperation with the gold mining industry was, has been forcefully demonstrated, in the comparatively brief period of fifteen years, by the spectacular advance in Canada's gold production of from $14,400,000 in 1918 to $76,000,000 in 1933. Undoubtedly, much of the American capital that financed the majority of mines inthe Dominion would have found its way west except for the disadvantages, occasioned by adverse propaganda and subversive legislation, involved in mining in the United States, and especially in our own state.

ACTION OF CANADA

Judging from recent events, however, it appears Canada has changed her attitude and plans to impose a tax upon the production of her gold mines. This action should have the effect of keeping American investment funds for mining at home. California has the natural attractions for this money if the law-makers of our country are wise enough to guarantee the required protection the industry merits.

If the Federal Government would follow in the footsteps of California and exempt gold mining from all taxation, as this state exempted gold bullion from its sales tax, public interest in the industry would be stimulated and the slack of some 20 years of neglect would be recovered with a rush. The move to relieve all gold mining securities from taxation would be particularly helpful in attracting large capital to gold mining investments and thus furnish ample funds for new exploration and development work which should be as productive of increased gold production for the United States as the corresponding policy proved for Canada.

NEW CAPITAL FOR MINING

So constructive and intelligent an attitude toward the gold mining industry by this nation, coupled with the new price of gold, which seems destined to go still higher, and with the monetary condition of the world as it is, would release a flood of capital for our gold mines. The consequence would be a widespread increase in employment, demand for machinery, building and agricultural supplies, and a vigorously growing production of gold that will, for years to come, assure the security of our nation and the prosperity of our people.

Mrs. F. T. Nilon and Mrs. Rachel Moore are entertaining Dr. and Mrs. John Moore, of San Francisco for several days this week.

FORESTS TO BE PLANTED OVER BURNED AREAS

Not trusting to the slow and uncertain process of natural transition, the Forest Service is now taking aggressive steps to refoorest thoose areas once covered with timber but now transformed intto brush fields by the action of repeated forest fires.

Two crews will be located on the Lassen National Forest this summer and fall, engaged in reclaiming the brush fields on the Antelope Mountain burn and the Burney Mountain burn. About 1,800 acres will be ploughed up with tractors and bulldozers and the ground prepared for the planting of ponderosa pine seed and young trees this fall after the rains commence.

Foresters state that the lower limit of the ponderosa pine forest belt on the lower slopes of the Sierra Nevada was formerly from 20 to 30 miles closer to the San Joaquin and Sacramento Valleys than at the present time.

Destructive lumbering practices followed by fires in the early days transformed this once forested timber belt to dense chaparral.

The reclamation work on the Lassen Forest is the highest planting undertaking yet started in California to restore forest cover on valuable watersheds and to perpetuate the timber supply of the state.

TRIBUTE PAID TO SOLDIER DEAD OF NEVADA COUNTY

Patriotic Organizations, School Children, Bands of Music, and Flags in Colorful Parade

BY HARLEY M. LEETE JR.

A reverent tribute was paid Wednesday to the nation's heroes when all the schools and patriotic organizations joined in parade down Broad street from Red Men's Hall and up Boulder street to the Pine Grove cemetery where impressive services were held in commemoration of the dead who perished that their country might live.

The Veterans of Foreign Wars led the parade; just after them marched, under the direction of Mr. Harold George, the Grass Valley band. They made a colorful segment of the parade with their bright red caps and capes. Also near the head of the parade was the American Legion firing squad. Next came the Nevada City high school band in their royal purple costumes. They were led by L. E. Sweeney. After them were the Nevada City high school students and then came the grammar school boys and girls.

All of the student sections were led by their teachers and carried bouquets which they later placed in reverence on the soldiers graves in the Catholic cemetery.

The parade extended from Red Men's Hall to the Plaza, the Veterans of Foreign Wars arriving at the Plaza, just as the grammar schools last lines were leaving the hall. The street was crowded with spectators, who watched until the last of the long line of cars which followed the parade, passed.

Services were held near the grave of William Hegarty, who died in the World War. On a raised platform were the following speakers: Mr. Raymond, Judge Jones, Mr. Burtner, and Mr. Murray, Mrs. Tonella, and Mrs. Figurski.

As the marchers assembled, the Grass Valley and Nevada City bands joined in playing America. The Veterans of Foreign Wars chaplain led a prayer.

Commander Raymond, of Grass Valley, gave a splendid talk on debt of the living to those who had given their lives for civilization and their country. Then the Nevada City band played softly, "Maryland, My Maryland."

Judge George L. Jones, who substituted for Darrold DeCoe, past state commander, of Sacramento, spoke eloquently of the war dead. He recalled the memory of Civil War

FOURTH OF JULY PLANS MATURING

Attorney Francis Finnegan, chairman of the general committee on the July 4th celebration, met with chairmen of the different committees Tuesday evening, to discuss plans for the celebration. It was evident from the enthusiasm shown by those present that the greatest of interest prevails for a splendid July Fourth celebration in Nevada City.

Plans are to dedicate the swimming pool and have appropriate exercises on the grounds and then to return to Broad street where the parade will be held as in other years.

Jack Rector was chosen as secretary of the general committee, to serve under Mr. Finnegan.

Mr. Finnegan is to address a Parent Teacher Association meeting this afternoon, in regard to their participating in the coming event.

Nevada City's new airport will not be ready for dedication until this fall when it is expected that appropriate exercises will be held.

A definite step has been taken to have plenty of band music for the Fourth.

This is the first time that a meeting of committees was so enthusiastic and so much interest was taken by all approached.

Another meeting of chairmen of general committees and their members and all interested citizens, is to be held next Tuesday evening in the Chamber of Commerce rooms.

MANY IMPROVEMENTS IN HOMES AND STORES

The Shamrock Cafe, under supervision of Mr. and Mrs. Wyant, is receiving a fresh coat of green paint, giving the front a most pleasing appearance.

Gene Barberi is having the front and interior of his business property on Lower Broad street remodeled into modern style. Mr. Barberi recently purchased the building from the M. Angiolini estate.

Taking away the porch across the front and east side of Plaza Grocery store gives more light into the interior and also gives the building a more modern appearance.

ALLEGED DRUNKEN AUTO DRIVER IS ACQUITTED

Anton Norman, of Modesto, accused of drunken driving, following a collision on East Broad street with a car driven by a Grass Valley autoist, was acquitted Tuesday. The man refused to testify that Norman was drunk, and evidence of drunkenness offered by Traffic Officer Will Fouyer, was practically uncorroborated. Under examination by Deputy District Attorney Robert Thorp, Norman claimed that he was looking for the street into which to turn on his way back to Modesto and did not see the approaching car. The case was tried before the court, the defendant having waived a jury trial.

GENERAL MOTORS HOLDS SPRING SHOWS

Miss Laverne Hager, pretty debutante, assisting J. C. Scripture, General Motors executive, with the "woman's touch" in the selection of Spring motif decorations for the General Motors National Exhibits to be held in San Francisco and Oakland, June 2-9. Large quantities of ribbons, drapes, and blossoms in pastel pink and meadow green are now transforming the Palace of Fine Arts in San Francisco and the Exposition Building in Oakland into huge Spring garden settings.

A few days of bustling, furious activity on the part of decorators and entertainment committees remains before the General Motors National Exhibits in San Francisco and Oakland are ready to throw open their doors to a welcoming citizenry on June 2.

"Our plans are proceeding smoothly to date," B. C. Mott, General Motors executive in charge of the big expositions explained yesterday. "The decorations have been completed and they are ready to go up. The various colorful exhibits of General Motors products are plotted out on the expansive flooring. The musical organizations are busy rehearsing the special numbers that will feature each afternoon and evening of entertainment for the huge crowds expected during the week of June 2-9 inclusive. If everything continues to work out as it has in the past week, Northern California residents are [illegible] viewing displays, second to [illegible] United States."

Among the motor cars to be viewed for the first time in formal presentation in Northern California are the new Buick Model 40 and the Chevrolet Standard model, introduced recently as the "world's lowest-priced six".

The San Francisco exhibit will be held in the Palace of Fine Arts, on the Marina. The Oakland exhibit will be held in the Exposition Building, 11th and Fallon streets, with Del Courtney's Athens Athletic Club band furnishing the music.

The exhibits are part of a nation-wide presentation of General Motors products in sixty key cities, for the purpose of stimulating interest and continuing the peak employment period of the automotive industry beyond its customary time. Among the products on display will be the latest and most colorful models of Cadillac, La salle, Buick, Oldsmobile, Pontiac, Chevrolet and General Motors Trucks, Chevrolet Trucks, Frigidaires, and Delco devices.

IT'S SALES TAX OR CHAOS, SAYS DIXWELL PIERCE

SAN FRANCISCO, May 28—Declaring that retention of the California sales tax is necessary to avert a crisis in public finance and to keep the schools open, Dixwell L. Pierce, Secretary of the State Board of Equalization, makes a strong plea that the citizens of the state face the tax problem courageously and intelligently.

Pointing out that the sales tax had been adopted to relieve common property of what was proving an intolerable tax burden and at the same time to provide enough money to keep the schools open, Pierce stated that educational costs amounting to $40,000,000 a year had been transferred from county taxpayers to the state to be financed from sales tax proceeds.

Reviewing the experience under the law, which is administered by the State Board of Equalization, he said:

"We are proud to report the results. During the first eight months of the tax, we have collected and paid into the State Treasury $32,685,000. This represents a monthly income in excess of $4,000,000.

"Because of shortage in other state revenues, every penny of the sales tax, with the exception of an administrative expense which is less than two per cent, goes to the support of the California school system, resulting in an average decrease of at least $1 per hundred dollars of assessed valuation on common property owners."

Decrying the activities of those who seek to repeal the sales tax by initiative measures, without supplying any adequate substitutes for the revenue thus lost to the state, Pierce quoted recent editorial comment saying that:

"The choice is not between the sales tax or some better tax, but between the sales tax and financial chaos, as far as the state government is concerned.

"Where is the money to come from if the sales tax were abandoned? Common property is already bearing an almost intolerable burden. Income taxes could not be expected to yield commensurate revenue."

"It is not a theory but a condition that confronts the people of California.

"It is easy to denounce the sales tax as infamous, but it appears in a different light when studied in relation to the actual situation as it exists today."

Urging voters to be cautious with respect to tax nostrums, Pierce said: "Do not let anyone convince you of the desirability of new theories of taxation without making sure that what he proposes is practical.

"When you are annoyed because of payment of sales tax pennies, consider that your payments added to those of other Californians, are raising a fund of more than $4,000,000 per month to keep our schools open. Let's pay for the benefits of government willingly, in pennies."

FROM DILLINGER TO WAR

The Administration is moving to prevent two diametrically different kinds of crime.

First completed move was the signing by the President of a group of bills requested by the Department of Justice, which provide Federal penalties for offenses that have heretofore been covered by state laws only. One bill provides that if a kidnaped person is kept seven days it shall be legally presumed that he has been taken across a state line, which brings it within Federal jurisdiction and makes it a very serious offense indeed. Other bills in the group make it a Federal crime to send extortion messages in interstate commerce, to flee across state lines to avoid prosecution or giving testimony in felony cases, to defraud or rob national banks, to ship stolen securities across state lines, and so on.

The passage of the bills gives Federal authorities a great deal more leeway than they ever had before in running down and punishing criminals. They are the direct result of the Dillinger "comic-opera," which has made everybody concerned, Federal and local authorities both, look pretty foolish.

In the second move the President is striking at war—international crime on the grand scale. He sent a resolution to Congress calling for ratification of international agreements that would call for licensing arrangements for international arms shipments. This, he said, would help to end the "mad race in armament which, if permitted to continue, may well result in war." The President wishes that special attention be given to ending the jungle warfare between Bolivia and Paraguay, which has been continuing for years in the Gran Chaco district. Not a great deal about that war has been heard in this country—but foreign observers say it is as ghastly, as needless and as destructive a conflict as has ever been fought.

Within the next few months there is going to be a great deal heard about the arms manufacturers—those who make big guns, big shells, tanks and similar weapons. It all started with an article in Fortune, which was reprinted in many newspapers commented on by many more. This was followed by two books by a well-known journalist showing the methods, the set-up and the activities of the great arms companies. There are no big concerns of the kind in this country, and it is said that our arms makers have for the most part kept aloof from the more nefarious activities of the European concerns. In Europe, however, their power extends into government—interlocking directorships and stock ownership make them an almost absolute trust. During the war English concerns shipped weapons to Germany—and Germany shipped supplies to England—through neutral Switzerland. An example: In Scotland there is a field piece in a public square. On one side of it are the names of the British troops who died in capturing it from the Germans. On the other is the manufacturer's name plate—Vickers, largest English arms maker.

LUMBER TALKS

Mary had a little house,
Its walls were drab and dingy;
And all the neighbors said to her,
"You're lazy dear, or stingy."
So Mary purchased cans of paint
To freshen up her kitchen,
And then kept working till she made
The whole durn house bewitchin'.

The Trail to Dead Man's Creek

I've ridden the trail and manned the sail
And weathered the desert sun
And I've dug for gold in the rocks and mold
On the bars of the Yuba run.
But I've never found any place around of which I'd rather speak
Than the spot where I camped beside the trail
On the banks of Dead Man's Creek.
Now perhaps you know of the tale of woe
In the lives of the mountain breed,
Who snipe for dust, with a shovel and pick,
In exchange for tobacco and feed.
Or perhaps you've cut through the rocks and brush
With a pack on your back and a pan
And followed the course to find the source
In crevice, ledge or fan.
But I'll bet you one you've never seen
A sight quite so unique
As I saw that night, if I saw aright
Alongside Dead Man's Creek.
Now there's a tale of a hidden trail
To a pocket of untold gold,
Of an old iron stake that marks the break
In a spot that was known of old.
Of a single man who made the find
And packed out wealth in a sack.
He was later found with his face to the ground
And a forty-four slug in his back.

These things that night by my camp fire light
Were running through my mind.
When I heard a noise and glanced up to see
The man of the long lost find
With a pack on his back and a miners pick
He stood and he looked at me
And "Stranger," he says, "Do you mind if I sit and have a bite with ye?"
So he sat down there on a boulder chair
And he helped himself to the grub.
And as he sat I saw the hole
That was drilled by the forty-four slug.
Then he filled his pipe and got a light
From a glowing twig in the fire
And he says to me, "I have that here,
For which I'd find a buyer."
And I saw the hands of that mountain man,
Were bony and white and cold,
As he showed me the sack beside him there
That was filled with the yellow gold.

So every year I take the trail
To the spot where I hope to meet
And barter there with the man who made
The name for Dead Man's Creek.

NEVADA FARMERS SEEK WATER FROM TAHOE

RENO, (Nev.), May 31—Preliminary negotiations looking toward the relief of drought-ridden farmers of Nevada by the emergency pumping of water from Lake Tahoe, have been opened with the California authorities by Governor Morley Griswold.

In making this announcement today Governor Griswold said a formal request for pumping would not be made until conferences are held with all the interested parties including the property owners on the lake shore.

The governor expressed assurance that emergency funds could be secured from the federal government but said it has not been decided definitely whether such funds should be used for the sinking of wells or for the purchase of water from Donner and Independence Lakes and pumping from Lake Tahoe.

The governor indicated he will seek a conference of all concerned soon to determine the best course to pursue.

TRUCKEE RIVER OPEN TO TROUT FISHERMEN

The Truckee river was opened to fishermen Wednesday, May 30, and several of Nevada City's Anglers journeyed over to spend the day along its banks trout fishing.

The dove season will open June 30th, and is always looked forward to with keen anticipation by local sportsmen.

Later in the season there will be a short open season on wild pigeons. Local residents report seeing several small flocks of these birds near Nevada City. At present they are feasting on cherries as they ripen.

SIERRA COUNTY MINES

The work of pumping out an old winze and cleaning out a tunnel on the Mountain, Euclid and other properties recently taken over by R. H. Plate and associates, on Sardine Lake, is progressing satisfactorily, and sampling of the properties should be completed within several weeks.

Ore taken from the Kenton mine near Alleghany, recently proved quite rich, 345 pounds producing $31,000.

In new workings in the Oriental mine near Alleghany, a piece of quartz valued at $16,000 was extracted, according to reports. William Hooten is superintendent.

New equipment is being installed at the Telegraph mine north of Downieville, which is under lease to J. M. Sheedy. A crew has been drifting on the channel.

GRANITEVILLE SAWMILL BUSY

"LIFE BEGINS AT FORTY," THEME OF MEDICAL DEAN

Medical science will make the phrase "Life Begins At Forty" a reality, according to Dr. L. Roscoe Chandler, Dean of the Medical School of Stanford University, who spoke yesterday in connection with Bank of America's statewide essay contest.

Other developments in medicine, in Dr. Chandler's opinion will be: The immediate future will bring forth tests for accurately determining the sex of the yet unborn; One's size and figure, like one's attire, can be made to order; Accuracy and ease of diagnosis will increase;—pernicious anemia and similar diseases affecting the red and white blood cells will be a negligible factor as a cause of ill health; Cancer is making its last stand against medical science. "Society," Dr. Chandler said "by spreading the cost of sickness through some plan of periodic payments, will provide a high standard and quality of medical service for people in all economic classes, if the medical profession itself is allowed to control the quality of that service. Not only will this medical service be available, but society will demand good health of its individuals."

HEADFRAME UP FOR PENNSYLVANIA MINE

The Pennsylvania mine, in Browns Valley has just completed the erection of a 40 foot headframe and men are now constructing an ore bin. Next week work of retimbering the work shaft of the mine is to start.

Twenty-five men are employed with W. H. Whiting as superintendent.

FAMOUS MEN LAUD BEAUTIES OF TAHOE

"Spend Your Vacation at Lake Tahoe This Year," is the slogan of a campaign now being launched. It's a fine idea—not alone because it saves money for Sacramento Valley vacationists, but because at Lake Tahoe they will find the most beautiful and healthful recreation spot in all the world.

This latter assertion is borne out by some of the great men of history—men who have traveled to all parts of the globe. Read these excerpts from their writings:

MARK TWAIN. "People will go to 'water cures' and 'movement cures' and to foreign lands for health; but three months of camp life on Lake Tahoe would restore an Egyptian mummy to his pristine vigor, and give him an appetite like an alligator. The air up there in the clouds is very pure and fine, bracing and delicious. And why shouldn't it be? It is the same the angels breathe."

THOMAS STARR KING: "To a wearied frame and tired mind what refreshment there is at Lake Tahoe! The air is singularly searching and strengthening. The noble pines enrich the slightest breeze with aroma and music."

WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN: "I cannot imagine there could be a more beautiful place on the face of the globe than Lake Tahoe. There one finds an inspiring grandeur. I believe everyone who sees Lake Tahoe has added something higher and finer to his life."

JOSEPH LECONTE: "I could dream away my life here with those I love. How delicious a dream! Of all the places I have yet seen, Lake Tahoe is the one I could longest enjoy and love the most."

JOHN VANCE CHENEY: "The traveler who looks upon Lake Tahoe for a few hours only learns little of its rich variety. Several weeks are required to drink in its full beauty and charm."

A. M. HOLMES

Nevada County Coroner—Offices in Nevada City and Grass Valley

Perhaps never before in the history of the county have the people given so much thought to the caliber of the man who will hold public office as well as their proved personal attributes and capabilities that would indicate how well they would hold their respective offices after being selected. This is true of the people of Nevada county, as it is of the nation. A. H. Holmes's constructive administration of his own private affairs and business has gained him a hearty regard and the respect of his colleagues, because his career as a citizen has been helpful and conducted in a sound and business-like manner. He has been indefatigable in his efforts to give the interests of his fellow citizens the best that is in him and his policies have been so manifestly honest and above board that he has won the plaudits of all, regardless of partisanship. It is such men who merit well at election time, for the day has passed when men are selected for office as a personal favor.

TRIBUTE PAID

Veterans, Judge Walling, Mr. Allen and the late Emil De Pratti, Judge Walling, a brilliant judge of Nevada county for many years—Mr. Allen always a kindly, sincere man, Mr. De Pratti, jovial and kindly. This is the first time Nevada City has celebrated Memorial Day without a Civil War veteran present. Honor was paid Mr. De Pratti as the last of that honored group who preserved a united nation. He stated that we could be proud of our soldiers down through the years, touching briefly on the Spanish American Veterans and those of the World War.

At the Catholic cemetery Judge Jones again paid tribute to soldier dead especially William Hegarty, over seas veteran, killed in action. He also called attention to an Italian boy of Nevada City, Charlie Gigni, whose body lies in France. The cross in the Catholic cemetery honors both heroes.

Judge Jones stressed that these heroes had helped the nation in giving their lives and while those were critical times, we at present are faced with grave problems and we must be ever ready to maintain our nation for what it stands, by staunch citizenship, upholding the principles upon which this country was founded.

Judge Jones also asked that all utter a prayer in our hearts for our governor in his critical illness and in prayer Rev. Father O'Reilly asked for Governor Rolph's return to health.

After Judge Jone's excellent address, Nevada City's high school band played "The Star Spangled Banner. The American Legion firing squad about-faced and fired three volleys in salute. From a distant part of the cemetery Mr. Bennett, of Grass Valley, played taps, and concluded the program at the Catholic cemetery.

The speakers proceeded to the Pine Grove cemtery where similar, shorter, services were conducted.

There were nearly a thousand people at the Catholic cemetery and most of them had flowers with which they adorned the graves.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
by William Bruckart

Washington.—President Roosevelt's determination to advise congress as it leaves for home after the current session, of some of the things that he wishes to present for its consideration next January has injected a new factor into the forthcoming political campaigns. Most of the careful observers here think his maneuver was politically smart. They take the view that he actually has presented to the country and the voters the general outline of his future legislative program in order that he can have something of a mandate given the representatives and senators who are chosen in this fall's elections.

Smart Politics

I haven't seen any signs yet that will indicate how the Republicans and other anti-Roosevelt forces will attempt to meet this new factor, but it is quite apparent they will force debate upon many of the projects of the New Deal that have already been enacted into law, as well as the embryo plans contained in his late messages. Some leading thinkers around Washington have suggested that Mr. Roosevelt is taking advantage of the natural attacks that will be promoted by the opposition in order to ascertain for himself whether he has gone far enough with his social reform movements. It seems there can be no doubt that he will be in a position to know the temper of the country after the voters have heard his various New Deal items discussed. And, it is being suggested almost in the same breath that if the voters strike down many of the administration wheelhorses and those who have stood by the New Deal, the administration will not press some of the more far-reaching social legislation that Mr. Roosevelt mentioned in the series of messages lately sent to congress.

Examining the proposals, such as old age pensions, unemployment insurance, revision of NRA principles relating to minimum wages to meet practical instead of theoretical conditions and several others, one can hardly escape the conclusion that only the submission of them at this time when they will become fodder for campaign debate will enable the country to know its own mind. In other words, as I see the picture, if the country as a whole wants such far-reaching changes in its laws, it will show it by sending proponents of such proposals to seats in congress.

I have heard some discussion, however, to the effect that in taking the bold step of giving congress advance information of his thoughts, Mr. Roosevelt was seeking at the same time to present a more complete picture of his New Deal. By so doing, of course, he naturally can expect that proponents of the reform ideas will have something more to use in advocating retention of the changes. They will not be in the dark as to what the future holds. Many of them will have added confidence, especially if they have become a bit shaky about the course that the President is following. At any rate, if the Democrats emerge from the fall elections with anything like their present strength, the congress that meets in January, 1935, will be as tractable, or more so, than the present one. Anyone can see the President would be unable to put over his New Deal without an obedient congress, hence he is staking that need, too, by disclosing plans in advance.

* * *

It is not too much to say that there has been a tremendous stiffening of backbone in congress in the last several weeks. It has been more pronounced, I believe, than at any time since Mr. Roosevelt took over the reins. So there might possibly be some trouble brewing on Capitol Hill. This condition is regarded by some as being the more clearly discernible because the President frankly said he did not urge enactment of his proposals at this session.

Trouble Brewing

There has been no secret about the fact, around here, that Mr. Roosevelt wanted to get congress out of town at the earliest possible date. I have heard it suggested even that he had hoped he could get the leaders to bring about an adjournment before the silver question got out of hand. But that desire was lost, if he entertained such hope. He has had to swallow some silver legislation which, it is quite apparent, he does not like. Political expediency made it necessary.

No one here has been able to explain just why the silverites have been able to muster so much strength. There are only seven silver states, and from the political standpoint, it is to be assumed that they cannot wield the power that is inherent in legislation affecting the more populous areas. But the silver bloc has persisted in its efforts, has been recalcitrant in many ways, and it never was licked completely. As far as I am concerned, I cannot see where it is going to be of any particular help. But the silver advocates tell me I am wrong, and, whatever else may be said, their views forced Mr. Roosevelt into a corner where he had to take a small dose of silver medicine.

It was easy to see a week or so ago that if the President had been able to stall off the silverites a little longer, he would have succeeded in getting an adjournment before he was compelled to agree that the country's money should be backed by 25 per cent of silver coin or bullion. Financial sharps assure me that actually the legislation on silver will do nothing more than raise the price temporarily to those who have silver to sell.

* * *

Senator Borah's recent outbreak on the President's proposal for authority to negotiate reciprocal tariff agreements with foreign nations is typical of the dangers confronting the administration in a session where adjournment is too long delayed. Senator Borah, though a Republican and a member of the minority in congress, has a strong following in congress and throughout the country. When he arises in his place, therefore, and challenges the administration, urges the country to return to constitutional government and says there is "a niche alongside of Washington and Lincoln" for a brave leader to preserve a free government — when Senator Borah makes that challenge, a good many persons are going to ask, whither are we going? The Borah speech was such a ringing call for clear thinking that I believe his concluding paragraphs are worthy of recording for further dissemination:

Borah's Outbreak

"We have had emergencies before, have had more than one hour of peril. The Constitution has been sufficient and efficient in all instances. And now, of all times, we should show our faith in, and our devotion to, our form of government. Now, more than at any other time in our history, we should by word and act demonstrate the faith which made this Republic, and which will preserve it.

"In the midst of world turmoil, Washington pinned his faith to Constitutional democracy. That steadfast soul never wavered, never doubted. In the midst of civil war, Lincoln declared that the government of the people, for the people, and by the people should not perish from the earth. There is a niche alongside of these two immortal defenders of free government for the brave American who in his place of power accepts the challenge of these apostles of terror and fanaticism, of these enemies, avowed enemies of free government and of personal liberty, and against all comers declares his faith in the efficiency and the worth of the republican institutions and his determination to maintain and preserve them in all of their integrity at any cost and at all hazards."

It is to be noted that Senator Borah made no reference to any individual now entrusted with power. His challenge was to the New Deal in its entirety, according to the opinions that I have heard expressed. From many directions, I have heard views that the Borah speech probably would arouse more fright among opponents of the New Deal than anything that yet has happened.

* * *

The inability of some government officials to carry out assignments given them by President Roosevelt, as a result of overlapping of authority or assumption of power by others under the complexities of the present governmental setup, has begun to attract attention. There are numerous instances that can be cited, but lately I encountered one that appears to me to be typical.

"Ding" Hits Snag

Mr. Roosevelt brought J. N. Darling, who is probably one of the greatest cartoonists of our day, to Washington as chief of the biological survey. Mr. Darling, whose signature "Ding" is known far and wide, is a zealot in his desire to restore game birds and animals to the numbers of earlier years.

The biological survey is a unit of the Department of Agriculture. Funds with which Mr. Darling was to acquire waste land, timber, swamps and swail, were to come from the vast appropriation managed by Secretary Ickes of the Department of the Interior. There was to have been $25,000,000, and Mr. Darling said when he came to Washington that he believed a splendid job could be done with that sum. He proceeded upon recommendations of a Presidential commission to make plans for acquisition of the necessary lands and was moving at a steady pace when, lo! he learned that Mr. Ickes had declined to make the funds available as planned.

Numerous conferences followed. Secretary Wallace, of the Department of Agriculture, and Mr. Darling were said to have figuratively wept on each other's shoulder. They tried to find some way to get the money transferred so that the work could go on and, I understand, did get $1,500,000 made available from somewhere in the various alphabetical organizations.

In the meantime, I am told, Secretary Ickes was determined to have his own inspection made of lands proposed to be acquired, notwithstanding the fact that Mr. Roosevelt had named a commission for the specific purpose of locating the sites, etc. Also, in the meantime, it has been disclosed that the original $25,000,000 has been "earmarked" for several other propositions.

Chic Beach Togs, Cotton Crocheted

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

EVERY style-minded woman is wearing or will be wearing before the season is over something of cotton crochet. You are supposed to have at least one crochet garment in your spring and summer wardrobe and as many more as you may be fortunate enough to acquire. The important thing to remember is that for real chic the crocheting is done with either thread or string. The vogue for cotton-crochet garments grows more insistent with the passing of each day.

If you are looking forward to sunning yourself into a perfect physical condition this summer and if you aspire to do it modishly and if you crochet, the sun-suit and the beach dress in the picture will set your fingers all of a tingle to begin with hook and cotton without a moment's delay.

As everybody knows, it is neither hygienic nor comfortable to keep on a wet and chilly bathing suit while you are sunning yourself. A smart sun-suit like the one centered in this group comes to the rescue. You can make it yourself easily. Crochet either of heavy knitting or crochet cotton thread or of the now-so-popular crochet cord, which is so beautifully soft, comfortable and washable. The smart shutter effect over the diaphragm and the clever strap arrangement of this suit are unusual notes. A pleasing variety of stitches adds to its attractiveness.

Below, in the group, is a stunning and versatile garment. It is fundamentally a dress, but it does all sorts of tricks. The entire dress is crocheted of a heavy cotton crochet cord which is cool and delightfully wearable, having the advantage of being lightweight so that it will not hang on you in a cumbersome way. The straight skirt fastens up the front with square wooden buttons, and it will come undone as far as you need it for a vicious serve or a flying leap on the beach. It is backless to the waist and has two narrow straps which button together with the same brown buttons. The straps unbutton and slip off the shoulders for a perfect sun bath. Note the cunning crochet cap which fits so snugly, keeping the hair from blowing about.

The little short-sleeved sweater with the turnover collar shown at the top of the illustration is an item you cannot well do without in your resort wardrobe. You will find that it will fit in with any number of occasions. It is charmingly made of a fine mercerized crochet cotton, and the lacy openwork stitch up the front lends an air which distinguishes it from the general run of sports sweaters.

Have you seen the voguish two-piece frocks (blouse and skirt) which up-and-doing women are crocheting of natural colored string? These string-knit dresses are a most enviable possession and as the summer advances you will be congratulating yourself on being the owner of a costume which so faithfully bespeaks a well-dressed appearance. The charm of it is that it can be kept immaculate in that it tubs perfectly. The skirt will especially prove a treasure, for it can be worn with all sorts of dainty lingerie blouses.

BRIEF SPORT TOGS FOR REAL ACTION

The shirtwaist dress with a skirt "and an extra pair of pants" is a timely suggestion for the girl who hails any sort of excuse for shedding her skirt. Shorts are accepted by the right people even though they are so often abused by the wrong people.

It's cotton time again. Among the many kinds of cotton which are highlighted is seersucker, a type which makes its entrance in something miraculously like a disguise.

There seems to be a brisk demand for plain cottons, either white or pastel, by way of change. The rank and file of shirtwaist dresses are made of striped shirtings, cotton or silk. Many of these open center front, and fasten with pearl buttons. The shorts beneath are either separate, or are one with the shirt, in which case the skirt is separate. All of which makes things easier for the laundress and more practical for everyone.

Gloves, Bags, Muffs Take on Increased Proportions

The bags, gloves and muffs which give a fashionable finish to new costumes have taken on increased proportions to fit the long, sweeping silhouette.

Bags are huge. Schiaparelli makes one of mahogany brown calfskin which is almost as large as a small overnight bag.

The new "pillow" muffs cover the entire front of the figure. Exactly the shape of an oblong pillow, made of such furs as beaver and astrakhan, they recall the muffs carried by the beauties of the nineteen hundreds.

The newest and smartest gloves are of fur (breitchwantz or caracul) and come half way up the lower arm. Others are made of the same wool as the ensemble and cuffed in fur to match its trim.

In such bulky stuffs as these they are naturally larger than last year's gloves.

NEWEST EARRINGS

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Listen to this, for it's news, real news with a thrill—earrings that outline the lobe of the ear! See them pictured here. At the top a clip earring in the form of a handsome large gold leaf almost covers the ear lobe. This is a most popular type for daytime wear. The conch shell inspired the design for the becoming rhinestone clip earrings that outline the ear lobe of the patrician young woman posing below in the picture.

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

AN UNEXPECTED FRIEND

WHILE Redcoat the Tanager was telling Peter Rabbit of his dreadful accident, Mrs. Tanager was flying about in the treetops nearby, calling anxiously. She did not look at all like Redcoat, for she was dressed almost wholly in light olive green and greenish yellow. "He can't even fly up just a little way so as to get off the ground!" she cried anxiously. "Isn't it dreadful, Peter Rabbit, to have such an accident happen? We've just got our nest half built, and I don't know what I shall do if anything happens to

Meanwhile Mrs. Tanager Came and Talked to Him and Fussed About Him.

Redcoat. Oh, dear, here comes somebody! Hide, Redcoat! Hide!"

Poor Redcoat, with the old look of terror in his eyes, hurried along, trying to find something under which to hide. But there was no way of hiding that wonderful scarlet coat. Peter heard the sound of heavy footsteps, and looking back saw Farmer Brown's Boy coming. "Don't be afraid, Redcoat," he whispered. "It's Farmer Brown's Boy, and I'm sure he won't hurt you. Perhaps he can help you." Then he scampered off a short distance and sat up to watch what would happen.

Of course, Farmer Brown's Boy saw Redcoat. No one with any eyes at all could have helped seeing him because of that wonderful scarlet coat. He saw, too, by the way Redcoat was acting, that he was in great trouble. He understood instantly that something was wrong with one wing, and running forward he caught Redcoat.

"You poor little thing. You poor beautiful little creature," said Farmer Brown's Boy softly as he saw the cruel twig sticking through Redcoat's shoulder. "We'll have to get that out right away," continued Farmer Brown's Boy, stroking Redcoat ever so gently. Somehow at that gentle touch Redcoat lost much of his fear and a little hope sprang into his heart. This was no enemy, but a friend. With his knife Farmer Brown's Boy cut off the twig on the upper side of the wing. Then, doing his best to be careful and to hurt as little as possible, he worked the other part of the twig out from the under side. Carefully he examined the wing to see if any bones were broken. None was, and after holding Redcoat a few minutes, he carefully set him up in a tree and withdrew a short distance. Redcoat sat there for some time as if fearful of trying that injured wing. Meanwhile Mrs. Tanager came and talked to him and fussed about him and coaxed him and made as much of him as if he were a baby.

After a while he ventured to try his wing and found that he could fly. Then he and Mrs. Tanager disappeared in the Green Forest.

"I knew Farmer Brown's Boy would help him, and I'm so glad he found him," cried Peter happily and started for the dear Old Brier Patch.

Mother's Cook Book

THIRST-QUENCHING DRINKS

LONG ago before a mixed drink was ever thought of, the lemon was the king of fruit, used for refreshing, healthful drinks as well as served hot, for medicinal purposes. Today it is more popular and more widely used, as it is needed to give zest to almost any other fruit drink.

For those who like to have a tinkling drink to offer a friend in a hurry, the fruit juice mixed with the sirup is a great convenience. Take one and one-half cupfuls of lemon juice and add three cupfuls of sugar. Bring to a boil and cook for ten minutes, then bottle and place in the ice chest. Use the sirup in glasses of water and ice without any further preparation. A tablespoonful or two to a glass is sufficient.

Lemons as well as oranges are rich in vitamin C. They are recommended as the best kind of a preserver for the teeth. Mix lemon juice and salt and use as a cleanser of teeth and gums. Add water and use as a mouth wash. It leaves the mouth feeling refreshed and stimulated, is especially good for the gums, to harden and keep them firm and healthy.

Raisins.

Put one pound of raisins through the food chopper, add a quart of water and bring to a boil, then let stand over night. Add the juice of two lemons, two tablespoonfuls of the sirup and pour into glasses half filled with cracked ice.

Coffee Caramel Parfait.

Scald one and one-half cupfuls of milk with two tablespoonfuls of ground coffee, add one-half cupful of caramelized sugar, one-fourth teaspoonful of salt to the strained milk and coffee. Beat two egg yolks with one-half cupful of sugar and add to the other ingredients. Cool, add a teaspoonful of vanilla and one and one-half cupfuls of cream. Pour into a mold and pack in ice and salt for four hours.

BONERS

An epicure is a man who claims he has a cure for all mankind.

BONERS are actual humorous tid-bits found in examination papers, essays, etc., by teachers.

BUNDLE OF JOY

By ANNE CAMPBELL

MARILYNN'S her name, but we
Have another we employ!
It describes her perfectly!
Bundle of joy!

There are sacks of shining gold.
There are silks of rarest dye.
There are bundles, which unrolled,
Capture the eye.

But a priceless tapestry
Spread against the blue of day
Does not mean as much to me
As one clear ray

From a baby's azure eyes!
With a glance both pure and coy
She can bring me Paradise!
Bundle of joy!

WITTY KITTY

Carbon Dioxide

Carbon dioxide, the stuff of which all vegetation is made, is held in the atmosphere. Remove it and there would be no trees and grass and consequently no higher animal life. The same can be said of the oxygen we breathe and of the nitrogen by which it is diluted, so that we may not be consumed by a process of flameless combustion, and of the comparatively rare gas hydrogen. Life depends not only on an atmosphere, but on a very complex atmosphere of the right chemical composition and physical state.

For Rainy Days

Here is a neat raincoat of rubberized seersucker in the English wrap-around model. It is light in weight and attractive.

"After seeing the attention that is showered upon the poodle," says Reno Ritzi, "men begin to think the only thing bad about leading a dog's life is that the average twelve years is too short."

This College for Girls Has a Bar!

IT SOUNDS startling to say that a girl student can amble right up to a bar in her college and order a drink. However, this new bar in Barnard college, New York City, serves only milk, which the girls buy for three cents a drink.

NINE CAMPS TO IMPROVE STATE TIMBER STANDS

Nine camps of about 30 men each will be employed this summer on timber stand improvement work on five national forests of California. This is, according to Forest Service officials, the first time that technical forestry has been practiced in the national forests.

For the first time Uncle Sam in going technical in his handling of the timber stands in the national forests of California. Heretofore, busy with the construction of roads, trails and administrative buildings, Forest Service officials have been able to practice forestry only through the sale of timber to lumbermen. Now, according to T. D. Woodbury, assistant regional forester, about 300 men will be employed in nine camps in five national forests this summer, treating the stands of young timber on cut-over lands much the same as a farmer handles his vegetable garden.

Technical foresters will better the condition of the trees by thinning the stands to give more light to the crowns and more ground space for the root systems, defective and diseased trees will be removed, and the most valuable species will be encouraged. Named in order of importance, the favored species are sugar pine, ponderosa pine, incense cedar, Douglas fir and white fir. Areas for this stand improvement work will be selected where young trees of all ages are growing on Government land.
